OHARCHITECTURE presents OH13 – Max Policansky Monograph. Policansky designed many industrial buildings in the 1930s through to the 1970s. His streamlined, functionalist buildings are seen by many as Cape Town's first real expression of the International Style of the Modern Movement. The tour will be complemented by short lectures which will focus on Policansky's work, its influence on Cape Town's garment industry, and the rich social history that was as a consequence of these massive production houses.

An office block in front of an existing factory, which was extended and which itself had an allowance for vertical extension on a flat concrete roof which was used as an interim proposal as an amenity for office staff. Building entered from Main Rd, under a showroom. This building provided a facade behind which certain factory spaces function.
